

CHICKEN FLOCK AT LUMBERJACK

Fefi
Hello, as a laying hen I lay around 200 eggs each year.
My colleagues from conventional agriculture lay up to 300 eggs a year.

Traudl
Servus, I enjoy my life in organic farming at Lumberjack.
I can live here for 3-5 years and lay my eggs.
My colleagues from conventional agriculture turn usually only 1.5 years old.

Berta
Good day! Here in organic farming, my brothers - the male chicks - are also allowed to live a contented life. In conventional agriculture the male chicks are killed, because no one wants to have them.

Nani
Hello, I belong to the breed of the Australorp, there are also the following breeds at the Lumberjack:

Franz
I belong to the Maran Copper breed and I have very colorful plumage. If you look closely, you can also see my beautifully feathered legs - they are always an eye-catcher.
